SiteComments:

Small homesteads were located in the Project Area during the past few decades. These homesteads consisted of dwellings that were grouped together. Each cluster of homesteads may have contained as many as three to six or seven dwellings. These dwellings were constructed with stone and clay foundations on which clay and/or brick walls were constructed. All the residences were square or rectangular. They are associated with middens composed of ash, fragments of coal and modern household debris. The houses were probably covered with corrugated iron roofs.
