Site RH-012

Site Category: Settlement

SiteComments:

The Site RH-12 stone structure remains are inferred to represent a settlement or lookout point type Colonial Period structure. Structure remains measure approximately 1.5+m in length, but alluvial impact has taken a negative toll on the structure itself. A number of fragmented pieces of blue and white porcelain are present on the surface of the site with the potential of classification to type level that will assist with at least dating of the site, should any diagnostic pieces be uncovered. In addition to porcelain pieces, earthenware, glass and rusted metal form part of the surface artefact assemblage. The site will be impacted on by inundation levels and Phase 2 archaeological mitigation should precede development.
