Archive Import History: K2, which was occupied in ca 950 A.D., contains a wealth of stratified cultural material representing a major economical and political transitory phase in Southern Africa, namely the settlement of agriculturist-pastoralists in an area previously inhabited mainly by hunter-gatherers. Furthermore, the K2 people were involved in the development of trade with the east coast of Africa, in other words the contact between the peoples of Central Southern Africa and the traders of the Indian Ocean.
