Archive Import History: Visual Description: Botshabelo village nestles in a valley alongside the Klein Olifants River. It is protected by three forts, most notably Fort Merensky (a declared site) to the north and built above the church and village and two forts that protected the Moutse area where the black converts lived. Apart from the mission station structures and the Ndebele village, the landscape is also defined by ridges containing mostly rare indigenous (Bankeveld) flora, extensive stone walling and planted areas of historic significance.
