SiteComments:

Archive Import This railway station building was completed in 1897 by the Nederlandsche Zuid-Afrikaansche Spoorweg-Maatschappij and is one of only a few elegant station buildings erected by the NZASM. For approximately nine years the Klerksdorp Station remained the western terminus of the so-called South-Western Line and as such it held an important place in the Transvaal railway network. The Old Flag Room was erected in the same style as that of the station building. Construction Date: 1897
