SiteComments:

Archive Import History: The Divisional Council Offices and the Drostdy Hotel stand just above the so-called "Coachman's Cottage". The former is a comparatively recent building, while the Drostdy Hotel is older and has its own history. Although it might be difficult to justify the proclamation of these buildings on strictly historical grounds, they have considerable architectural merit and are of such a character that they fit in well with the Braak and the surrounding buildings. For these reasons and to ensure the preservation of the harmonious appearance of this area the façades of these buildings facing the Braak have been proclaimed.
