Archive Import History: Visual Description: This house, which was erected in the late nineteenth century, consists of a single-storeyed building with bay window and finely decorated cast iron verandah. The entrance has a single teak door with side and fanlights. The windows are all large-paned sash windows fitted with interior burglar bars. The façade of the house is finely decorated with plaster mouldings and ornamentations. The bay window which stretches above roof-level is topped by a pedimented gable with a small rose-window as centrepiece Also of interest are the interior ceilings which all have central roses. A magnificent Victorian fireplace is also located in the lounge. This dwelling-house with its typical Victorian characteristics forms an integral part of the architectural character of Faure Street, where the buildings are predominantly Victorian and of outstanding quality Colours: Site Features: Condition: Construction Date: Materials: Catalogue: , No: , Significance Category:
