

Archaeological Site Report	SiteNo	9/2/081/0050
	Site Name	Rhodes Cottage, 246 Main Road, Muizenberg, Cape
	Date	Town
	Project
	CaseNID
	Coords	-34.114415, 18.464076
Page No: 1	SiteAutoID: 27707

Site Category: Building

SiteComments:

Archive Import History: Rhodes's cottage stands on the main road to Simons town, facing the sea between Muizenberg and St. James. It was formerly known as Barkly Cottage. Cecil Rhodes bought it on 27th February, 1899, from the estate of J. R. Reid. At the end of that year the Anglo-Boer War broke out and Kimberley was besieged. Rhodes was in Kimberley during the siege, but when the siege was raised early in 1900 he returned to this cottage at Muizenberg to recover his strength. However, it was after his return from England in February, 1902, that he became most closely associated with the cottage. Almost immediately on his arrival at Groote Schuur he drove down to the cottage in the 12-14 h.p. Wolseley car he had brought with him from England. He was already suffering from the heart disease which was to cause his death. He retired to bed immediately but he could not lie down and had to sit propped up by pillows. The weather was extremely hot and the cottage had an iron roof at that time, so a hole was made in the wall next to his bed to give him more air. While he was in this condition he had to give evidence against Princess Radziwill who had defrauded him of thousands of rand. On 26th March, 1902, just before six o'clock in the evening, he died here in this house. The cottage remained in the possession of the Rhodes Trustees until 1932, when they donated it to the government of Northern Rhodesia, who transferred it to the City Council of Cape Town in 1937. Visual Description: Colours: Site Features: Thatched outbuilding Condition: Construction Date: Materials: Thatch on plastered brick Catalogue: , No: , Significance Category:

AdminComments:

Inscription: 'The Rhodes Cottage Museum was restored through the kind generosity of De Beers Consolidated Mines Ltd to mark the centenary of the Company in 1988. This plaque was unveiled by the Chairman of De Beers, Mr Julian Ogilvy Thompson, on 28th June 1989.'

Damage Types: