3. Architectural Significance:

Original date of construction:

Significance:	There are no significant or noteworthy architectural characteristics. Apart from the 'tudor style', mentioned previously, or perhaps hints of mid-century in the 'prairie style' by the detailing of some brick lintols over openings, there is no constant dominant style evident. There is detailed brick and stone quoining at the main entrance as well as the original detailing of the solid timber front door which suggests the home may have started in a particular style, but has not been maintained throughout the historical alterations. The tudor truss detail on the external has been maintained throughout all the alterations and additions, but the rest of the changes have varied from this style.

D. WORK CARRIED OUT WITHOUT PRIOR APPROVAL

1. Purpose of Application:	Damage/destruction/demolition		Alterations/Additions	✓
Redecoration	✓	Disfigured Written/drawn on	Excavation

Exhumation		Inundation		Development
Collection/Removal from original site		Trade/export (heritage objects)		Restricted use of equipment s40(5)
Consolidation/Subdivision		Amendment of Plan	✓	Other

2. Existing Improvements made on site:

The earliest building application available from city records was approved by the City of Durban in 1954. However, the neighboring property that clearly indicates this applicants dwelling on its site plan was approved in 1945, suggesting that the building was built before this year. We can only therefore assume the building is approximately 77-80 years old.

3. Detail the work commenced/carried out

The alterations and additions match the existing elements where amended. The new light-weight external carport is the only alien element that reads as a more contemporary material addition. This is positioned centrally and inbetween the existing structures of the granny flat and main house. The main structure maintains the red facebrick plinth surround, as well as the decorative 'tudor' elements on the elevations. The existing timber lattice screen has been removed off the side of the existing veranda, a structure that was also introduced as an extension of the original structure. The earliest building application available from city records was approved by the City of Durban in 1954. However, the neighboring property that clearly indicates this applicants dwelling on its site plan was approved in 1945, suggesting that the building was built before this year. We can only therefore assume the building is approximately 77-80 years old. The building represents hints of 'tudor style' elements. It has gone through various alterations & additions over its time (1954, 1967, 2007), watering down these elements and rendering any historiocal significance negligible. The bastardisation has attempted to maintain the 'tudor style' by matching the timber beam facade elements with cosmetic plasterwork elsewhere. The building maintains a red facebrick plinth and texured plastered and painted walls. There is a combination of original varnished timber windows and new brown aluminium types, as well as a terracotta tiled roof. There is a single storey granny flat which was an extension of the existing garage, with plastered and painted walls, brown aluminium windows & doors and a terracotta tiled roof.

4. Motivation for work (Please motivate fully why work was commenced without approval)

The building is a domestic dwelling house in a suburban context set behind solid boundary walls, most of which are covered by mature creepers. The area is surrounded by several similar sized homes that have been re-worked and extended in various styles over time. There is no dominant architectural language in terms of the urban context to relate to.

The building is a family home that has required tailoring as the family has matured over time. Under the current application, the main structure has had very little cosmetic amendment, and only includes the resizing of some windows and the bricking up of others. The clip-on covered carport replaces the garages that have been altered into a granny flat under previous approved application.

The removal of a timber lattice element off the side of the veranda (which was an addition under previous application), is simply not required as a privacy screen element anymore.

It is my opinion that there is no significtant historical value that has been altered with under the current proposal and look forward to receiving a favourable response and Amafa's approval of these proposed amendments.
