

Annexure A - Historical Significance

The following is an annexure to the formal application for additions work to 119 Doble road, Bluff.

To establish a timeline of when the building/ building location was established, we cross reference prominent landmarks with dated maps. This is an easy way to establish and approximate date due to the radial development pattern seen throughout Durban's History. The approximate time line that 119 Doble road can be found by comparing the 2 maps and their development in relation to the Inauguration of the Original Bluff Lighthouse 1867. 119 Doble road will be represented with

Sometime after

1967

With this knowledge, we can confidently say that the area in which 119 Doble road is situated was developed between 1930 and sometime before 1967. Note* this does not mean the building itself was built then, but rather gives us an understanding of the timeline of the area. So we can expect the fading out of the rigid Victorian / Edwardian styles by 1930. These buildings were still being built, they were less prevalent compared to the pre-1900's. There was a pro-liferation of the Art deco style from 1930 and onwards, which can be seen in the expected areas with respects to the radial development, see Berea/ Musgrave which lay within the same proximity/age of 119 Doble road.

119 Doble road does not have any noteworthy historical significance when discussed within the framework mentioned above. The nearest landmark / historically significant building is 'The White House - 1995' which is situated 1.6kms away.
