Dear Shawn,

I support the issue of the two permits applied for (Valentine and Clackworthy), and I agree with your note about caution in raising Clackworthy's expectations of a full permit later. Who will be doing the supervision of the test excavations?

Mike Raath

1. What will happen to the propeller once it has been removed?
2. I have no objection to the survey permit provided it is made clear that this will not automatically result in a full excavation permit being granted.

Dear Mr Berry,

My comments are as follows:

1. I have no objection to the removal of the propeller. It is unclear from the abstract what is to become of it once removed.
2. I have no objection to the Sacramento wreck being surveyed. I think that it must be made clear that this is not a guarantee that an excavation permit will be issued.

Best wishes,

Dear Shaun

1. I have no objections to the propeller being removed. Will it then be sold for scrap or will it go to a museum? What are the plans for stabilizing it if it is to be displayed?

2. We could issue the non-intrusive survey permit and say that it is not the current policy of SAHRA to issue permits for the removal of shipwreck items for commercial sale. SAHRA will have to either join the divers regularly to check on their operations and/or have someone there to report to SAHRA. However, a permit for removal could be considered if (a) the survey can show convincingly that the conservation status of the items is being compromised by remaining under water; (b) a professional maritime archaeologist is part of the team; (c) funds will be sourced by the permit holder for the stabilization of all items; (d) the items will not be sold for commercial purposes; and (e) a museum with the requisite storage and/or display facilities is willing to curate the material in perpetuity.

Best wishes
Janette

Dear Ratanang,

SALVAGE OF PROPELLER

I had the privilege to read about the agrounding of the SS Haleric steamship that occurred in 1932/3 near Paternoster Point on the West Coast, Western Cape. It is alleged that the wreckage of the steamship resulted in the construction of the Cape Columbine lighthouse which is still standing today as one of the first lighthouses along the South African coastline to receive three navigational safety devices, namely a foghorn, a radio beacon and a lens designed for use with incandescent light-bulbs. The lighthouse and the information relating to the SS Haleric is part of the Turtle SA Tours. Thus, if the permit is granted it would be advisable to recommend that the permit-holder be required to also work with the Turtle SA Tours in order to mitigate the potential impact of the removal of the propeller on the SS Haleric associated tourism message and experience. Furthermore, before the permit is granted, it is important that the following questions asked by Dr Deacon be answered so that the fate of the propeller could be known:

- 1) Will it then be sold for scrap or will it go to a museum? If sold, who will benefit from the sale?
- 2) What are the plans for stabilizing it if it is to be displayed?

PRE-DISTURBANCE SURVEY OF THE WRECK OF PORTUGUESE GALLEON

I have no objection to the permit. However, Dr Deacon's issues should be addressed to the applicant.

Regards

Ntsizi November

Dear Shaun

Kindly receive my sincere apologies for the delayed response.

1. I fully agree with Janette Deacon regarding clarity on where the propeller will be taken to once removed from its current position. I support the issuing of the permit on condition that the concern above is addressed.

2. Application supported.

Dear Shawn

I have no objections for a permit to salvage a propeller near Paternoster Point (1. Stephen Valentine). The second permit, Pre-disturbance Survey Permit, I have no objections with if it is only an survey permit offered. It however seems like Gavin Clackworthy and team want to do more than just survey the wreck site and any further work would need a new permit, I assume.
