Bono Rambani and baby Shekinah Rambani are ecstatic to see their hero. 'I'm a huge fan,' says Rambani. 'I always have been, but I'm even more excited to see Loyiso sing gospel now.'

Loyiso with long-time fan, Anel Goosen.

Platinum-selling South African singer Elvis Blue stopped by to see Loyiso.

Loyiso wows his fans at Cresta

GOSPEL sensation Loyiso Bala was at CUM Books in Cresta on 21 June to promote his newest album Power/Love/Sound.

"I haven't actually done promoting before," the famous singer confessed while signing autographs and posing with fans.

The album gets its name, and its inspiration from Bible verse 2 Timothy 1:7 For God has not given us a spirit of fear but of Power, Love and a Sound mind.

Bala said that this verse in particular gives him strength. "We recorded this gospel CD and DVD in April at Rhema Church in Randburg," he explained.

"My band was there for the recording and it was great."

He describes the music on the CD as music that appeals to the youth.

Loyiso has won five South African Music Awards (SAMAs), has even been nominated for an MTV-award and has been the recipient of GQ's most stylish man award. Highlights of his career include performances alongside big names such as Jamella, John Legend, Elton John and Akon and performing for dignitaries Nelson Mandela, Richard Branson and Oprah Winfrey.

He would probably say his relationship with God is his biggest triumph though.

"It's been an awesome ride," he said.

MOVIE REVIEW: Blended

REVIEWED BY: Kirsten van Jaarsveld
GENRE: Romantic Comedy
RUNNING TIME: 117 minutes
STARRING: Adam Sandler, Drew Barrymore, Wendi McLendon-Covey
DIRECTOR: Frank Coraci
RATING: 5/10

Currently screening at Ster-Kinekor theatres. Jim (Adam Sandler) and Lauren (Drew Barrymore) are single parents. After a horrendous blind date (he takes her to Hooters, a restaurant chain focused on skimpily-clad young women) they vow to never meet again. But fate intervenes, and after several incidental meetings Jim, Lauren and their respective children accidentally find themselves together at Sun City in South Africa on an African get-away.

This is the premise of Drew Barrymore and Adam Sandler's new romantic comedy Blended. It's the third time the duo team up for a movie following the hits 50 First Dates and The Wedding Singer.

But is the third time the charm? Honestly, no. While the movie was certainly entertaining, it felt as if the script-writing had let the cast down.

Some of the emotional undertones in Blended promised something beautiful, particularly the initial scenes regarding parent-child relationships. But other parts of the movie were a brand of slap-stick comedy that - while certainly amusing - didn't gel with its earnest counterpart. The ending was predictable and plot-ends were tied up too hastily to my liking.

Some of the scenes were intriguing and sweet; others bland and expected, and most of the dialogue fell flat.

From a local perspective, it was thrilling to see South African landscapes and even our lethal fast-bowling cricketer Dale Steyn on the big screen in a big Hollywood blockbuster.

VERDICT: I'm on the fence with this movie. I didn't dislike watching it, but I wished for more. Anyone who wants to relax and have a laugh should go and enjoy it. *Thanks to Ster-Kinekor for making the review possible.
