Urban School turns 75

WESTDENE – Urban School in Westdene celebrated their 75th year with a school fun day. Great weather on 14 June ensured that attendees had a lot to do and a lot of fun at the event. Children enjoyed face painting, traditional games, sports and fancy-dress costumes. An array of food stalls satisfied everyone's hunger pangs. At night, the kids were dropped off home, while adults enjoyed a wine auction and a sumptuous dinner accompanied by live music. MC Lizz Meiring entertained the guests.

UJ student presents...

SHANGHAI – Soweto-born Katlego Lancelot Mailula dreamed of becoming a medical doctor.

Although fascinated with the science of medicine and a keen interest in helping people, Mailula could not see himself office bound.

He opted to pursue a career in environmental health after carefully assessing his options, taking his passion for science and his eagerness to assist society into account.

Now, 23 years old, Mailula is in his third year studying toward a national diploma in environmental health at the University of Johannesburg (UJ).

He is part of a select group of bright young students who will be sharing their ideas, knowledge and perspectives on the wide range of challenging issues around food contaminants at the 2014 Universitas21 Undergraduate Research Conference hosted by Shanghai Jiao Tong University in China, from 7 to 11 July.

Mailula conducted research on the safety of milk and will present his research findings at the Universitas21 conference. The theme of the conference is Food Safety, From Farm to Table.

"The majority drink milk but are not familiar with the process of milk production – from the farmers to the end product used by consumers," he explains.

"Access to nutritionally adequate and safe food is the right of every individual. It should be emphasised that food safety, from farm to table, is the responsibility of all: not only food growers, packers and handlers, but even consumers at their homes."

His research seeks to offer an overall view of the process, the model of risk assessment in the food system, and the efficient process control of food contamination. Mailula expressed his gratitude toward UJ for the opportunity to present his research on an international platform. "To be part of the Universitas21 Undergraduate Research Conference would not have been possible without the exceptional lecturing staff at UJ and all the support I received from the university throughout my studies. I am proud to be associated with an institution that continues to give students opportunities to gain experience in the field."

"This will be my first time overseas – let alone in an airplane," he added.

*In 2013, UJ became the first and only member from Africa to join Universitas21 – one of the most prestigious and innovative research-led university consortia in the world, where member institutions collaborate on undergraduate and postgraduate levels while sharing best practices.

Katlego Mailula is set to present the findings of his research into milk at Universitas21 Undergraduate Research Conference.
