

Summary and discussion

The analysis was done with the scenario:

- No rainfall for four years
- The groundwater table (level) can lower by 20m (available drawdown)

B 1

- Can be pumped at 2.12 l/s for 24 hours/day, or 2.99l/s for a 12 hour day.
- Volume of 182.9m³/day and 5486m³/month.
- Currently the amount of water extracted is in line with these results.

B2

- Can be pumped at 2.46 l/s for 24 hours/day, or 3.48 l/s for 12 h/day.
- Volume of 212.5m³/day and 6376m³/month.
- Currently the amount of water extracted is in line with these results.

The results show that the water can be pumped at 6.7l/s, but looking at the pump test as a whole, the recovery test shows a rather slow recovery for Borehole 2. This means that with the parameters as described i.e. no rainfall etc. the borehole cannot be pumped for long periods without recovery. Ignoring this might lead to aquifer loss. At present, both these boreholes are pumped at the correct yields and aquifer 'protection' with long enough recovery is practiced.

It is important to remember that the boreholes were tested at low yields. It is good practice to pump at lower yields to ensure a constant water supply. If these boreholes are to be pumped at higher yields, a 72 hour pump test at higher yields may be required.

BOTANICAL ASSESSMENT OF NOROKEI PAN PORTION 9/10 AND KALAHARI WES 251, PORTION 148 – PORTION OF 59 (VRYSOUPAN)

1. Introduction

I.G. Lute, Lute Mining cc., requested a botanical assessment of Norokei pan portion 9/10 and Kalahari Wes 251, portion 148 which is a portion of 59 (Vrysoutpan). A field visit to both salt pans was undertaken on 8th of August 2006. Norokei pan is situated ± 76 km N of Upington on the road to the Kgalagadi Transfrontier Park (2720DD). Vrysoutpan lies another ± 70 km further N (2720BD). A basic vegetation description of both pans will be given individually.

2. Vegetation description

The new Vegetation map of South Africa groups the salt pans of this area N of Upington into their own Vegetation Unit namely Southern Kalahari Salt Pans (Mucina, Rutherford & Powrie 2005). The surface of salt pans is normally so brack that no vegetation can grow there (Leistner 1967). The vegetation only occurs in some instances on the marginal zone of the pan.

2.1 Norokei pan

The pan itself is fenced in and outside the fence it is surrounded by low sand dunes. No vegetation grows on most of the pan surface due to the high salt content (see Figure 1). The only vegetation that was found was a few plants growing on the N edge of the pan next to the fence and an on area more to the NW edge of the pan. This area was characterized by a higher number of plants, mainly mesembs and a few grasses (see Figure 2).

Figure 1

Figure 2

The following plant species were found on these marginal zones:

- Eragrostis lehmanniana. - Poaceae
- Galenia sarcophylla - Aizoaceae
- Hypertelis salsoloides - Molluginaceae
- Lycium sp. – Solanaceae
- Mesembryanthemum sp. 1 - Mesembryanthemaceae
- Mesembryanthemum cf. inachabense - Mesembryanthemaceae
- Mesembryanthemum sp., presently known as Opophytum aquosum - Mesembryanthemaceae
- Pteronia sp.
- Salsola sp. - Chenopodiaceae
- Zygophyllum simplex - Zygophyllaceae

2.2 Vrysoutpan

The E portion (S 27° 20' 18"; E 20° 50' 48") of Vrysoutpan was surveyed during the field visit on the 8th of August 2006. No vegetation coverage was found on the pan surface. The pan is surrounded by low sand dunes (see Figure 3).

On the more sandy outer edge of the pan adjacent to the dunes the following plant species were found:

- Galenia sarcophylla - Aizoaceae
- Lebeckia linearifolia - Fabaceae
- Psilocaulon coriarium - Mesembryanthemaceae
- Stipagrostis amabilis - Poaceae

3. Protected species

Certain tree species are protected by the National Forests Act of 1988 and the Nature and Environmental Conservation Ordinance (No. 19 of 1974) protects certain plant species. All the plant species of the family Mesembryanthemaceae are protected according to the Nature and Environmental Conservation Ordinance.

Four protected plant species were recorded on the marginal zones of the pans during the survey (Mesembryanthemum sp., Mesembryanthemum inachabense, Opophytum aquosum, Psilocaulon coriarium).

Opophytum aquosum

Mesembryanthemum cf. inachabense

4. Recommendations

Written permission from the landowner would be required for the removal and/or destruction of all indigenous plant species. A permit should be obtained from the Northern Cape Department of Environmental Affairs and Conservation for the removal of protected plant species.

Seeing that these protected plant species only occur on the edges of the salt pans it is recommended that these marginal zones and lower sand dunes should not be disturbed during prospecting or mining processes.

It was mentioned above the salt pans of this area are grouped into their own Vegetation Unit namely the Southern Kalahari Salt Pans. Each salt pan with their surrounding vegetation forms a unique ecosystem. They also form part of the Arid Wetland ecosystem. Scientific studies have determined that 70% of an ecosystem needs to remain untransformed / intact to maintain the functions of and services provided by the ecosystem. It is therefore recommended that only 30% of the surface of these salt pans be disturbed in total by all current and future developments. In instances where more than 30% has already been disturbed it is recommended that no further expansion should take place after this application. Further disturbances will transform too large of this ecosystem and it will no longer be able to provide ecosystem services.
