SOUTH AFRICAN HERITAGE RESOURCES AGENCY

DECLARATION OF SITES WITHIN THE BO-KAAP NATIONAL HERITAGE SITES

By virtue of the powers vested in the South African Heritage Resources Agency, in terms of section 27 (5) of the National Heritage Resources Act (No. 25 of 1999) SAHRA hereby declares 19 Sites listed in the Schedule as part of the Bo-Kaap as National Heritage Sites.

Statement of Significance

The community spirit of Bo-Kaap as described in many historical studies has been carried through the last two centuries by generations of families residing in the area. The protection of religious, cultural and architectural heritage of the area is at the fore of community concerns.

Bo-Kaap contains the largest concentration of pre-1850 architecture in the country and is the oldest surviving residential neighborhood in Cape Town. The unique townscape comprises a range of architectural styles inclusive of Cape Dutch (14760 – c1815), Georgian (Cape English c1810 –1860), Victorian (c1860 – 1900) and Edwardian (c1900 – 1930). The character of the streetscapes is enhanced by the siting of the area on the slopes of Signal Hill, and thus enjoying views towards Table Mountain, the city bowl and the harbor.

The number of mosques within the area provides the Muslim community of Cape Town with not only a place of worship, but also provides opportunities for education and awareness. As the contributions made by the mosques are of great significance, a 'Mosques of the Bo-Kaap Committee' has been established to oversee the co-ordination and management of the 10 mosques in the area.

For purposes of declaration, the significance, the following categories have been utilized:

Historical value: The Bo-Kaap has the largest concentration of pre-1840 architecture in South Africa. Examples of properties of historical significance are the Schotse Kloof Homestead in Dorp Street and Spolander House in upper Wale Street.

Aesthetic value: The use of streets as defining elements is of particular significance. Examples of architectural significance includes houses in the old "National Monument" area (between Rose and Chiappini Streets) and the Wale Street Museum.

Scientific value: The quarry sites in Chiappini and Strand Streets have scientific and technological importance.

Social value: The area is highly valued by the community, religious institutions historians, architects and conservationists. Example of a site of social and spiritual significance is the Tana Baru cemetery. The area has strong links to the legacy of slavery.

Spiritual value: The numerous mosques, karamat and quarry sites have spiritual significance.

Rarity: The community as a whole is extremely unique and attracts a host of local as well as international tourists.

Representativity: Days of fasting and feasting are of great importance and are celebrated in splendor within the community – often attracting members of neighboring communities.

Living history: Rich sources of stories, legends, myths and values.
