Buk'Indalo Consultancy cc contracted Umlando to undertake an archaeological survey of the Southbroom Waste Transfer Site (Lot 909 Southbroom). The development area is 2 hectares in size.

The area is currently used for banana cultivation. The plantation has several furrows for irrigation purposes. These furrows occur near each other. Furthermore, small embankments have been made in some of the areas. Any archaeological site that may have occurred in that area has been severely affected.

The survey did not record any archaeological artefacts, and thus archaeological sites. No further mitigation is thus required.
