INTRODUCTION.

The inventory is based on a comprehensive survey of the buildings of Colesberg undertaken in 1985, and on a previous photographic survey done in December 1981. The photographs illustrating the inventory were all taken over the period of one week in September 1985. Those dating from 1981 have not been included, but the buildings demolished in the intervening period have been described in the text.

The latest buildings to be described in the inventory date from about the end of the Edwardian period. Without the authority of documentary research, no attempt has been made to assign dates to the individual buildings; however, the dates of proclamation of the erven do provide dates before which the buildings could not have been erected. No attempt has been made to grade the importance of the buildings, apart from descriptions of particularly good examples in the text, as this practice has sometimes had the effect of justifying the demolition of those buildings at the lower end of the scale.

The erven in Colesberg have been re-numbered, so two plans have been included. The first of these (old erf nos.), dating from 1933 and giving the original numbers and dates of proclamation, was provided by a firm of attorneys in Colesberg. The second (new erf nos.), dating from 1973 (a drainage scheme by Louw, Strydom & Partners), was provided by the Colesberg Municipality. The latter has some obvious mis-numberings (eg. Erf 2323, probably Erf 323, but entered in the inventory as received, and Erf 321, which appears twice on the 1973 plan, changed to Erf 327).

The plans illustrating the inventory do not show the major extensions on the northern and south-western sides of Colesberg between 1933 and 1973, as these date from after the period of the buildings under scrutiny. Likewise, with the exception of No. 1 Station Road, the buildings to the north of Chamberlain Square have not been described; although many of the erven shown on the plans date from as early as 1903, the buildings now occupying them consist of modern workshops and warehouses.

The buildings covered in the inventory have been described, where possible, according to the following criteria:-

- Erf number (new).
- Erf number (old).
- Date of proclamation.

- Street number and/or building name.
- Number of stories, roof configuration and cornice details.
- Facade configuration and detailed wall treatment.
- Presence of stoep or veranda.
- Types of windows.
- Types of doors and fanlights.
- Condition of building and degree of original appearance retained.
