

This book traces the footsteps of our ancestors in South Africa, using the Blouberg-Makgabeng-Senwabarwana (BMS) area as a case study. The BMS is one of the few areas in South Africa which was traversed and traveled by almost all communities who represent all South Africans of today. In this BMS area, the San once lived. The Khoikhoi also once settled here. The Bantu-speaking farmers came here and are still living here. The European travelers, hunters, traders and explorers once passed here. The European missionaries came and stopped here. The Boer and the British colonialists came and settled here. The BMS area is therefore a microcosm of the whole of South Africa, having been touched at various times by ancestors of all South African peoples. This book is intended to be used as reference to the learners, students, teachers and lecturers in History, Anthropology, Archaeology, Sociology, Heritage Studies, Tourism Studies, Geography, and can be read and enjoyed by all community members and stakeholders who just want to study or know more about the BMS area.
